Anne Whiston Spirn, photographer.

May 16th, 2020 - To Dorothea Lange I owe a great intellectual and artistic debt. My decision to produce a book of her unpublished texts stemmed from a desire to repay that debt nearly forty years ago. Lange's work revealed the synergy in what had seemed in my own life to be conflicting interests: the study of art and the making of art, the observing and portraying of the world and acting to change it.

Daring to Look presents never before published photographs and texts by the great photographer of America's migrant and displaced people, Dorothea Lange. This book is the first to restore Lange's work to its full context by reproducing the text of her field reports, which she called 'general captions,' together with the images she captured on film.
