

Les Pavements De Faïence En France Du XIe Au XVIIIe Siècle Images Du Pouvoir By Poiret Crã Pin Leblond

La faïence stannifère, type céramique mis au point en Mésopotamie vers la fin du VIIIe siècle, a fait son apparition en France, à Marseille dans la première moitié du XIIIe. Auréolée de prestige et entourée du mystère que lui conféraient ses spécificités techniques alors inconnues en France, elle a été utilisée par les personnages les plus puissants dès cette époque et jusqu'au milieu du XVIIe, pour réaliser des pavages destinés aux sols de grands projets architecturaux, édifices prestigieux par lesquels ils manifestaient leur grandeur. Ces pavements soulignaient, par le choix des motifs précieux et savants, la splendeur et le raffinement des couleurs, le pouvoir, la richesse et le rang social de leur commanditaire. Ainsi les pavements du Palais des papes à Avignon, du château des Gonzague à Nevers, de la Chartreuse de Champmol, de l'église de Brou ou du château d'Écouen, ont porté les images emblématiques du pouvoir, au même titre que les peintures, les sculptures, les tapisseries ou les objets d'art. Détruits ou oubliés, ces témoignages sont restés méconnus pour la plupart et n'ont que rarement fait l'objet d'études approfondies. Ce catalogue, catalogue d'exposition mais aussi Actes du colloque qui se tiendra à Brou en juin, rassemblera des recherches jusqu'alors menées séparément en archéologie, histoire et histoire de l'art. Il tentera d'élaborer des synthèses sur l'ensemble de la France et d'établir d'éventuelles comparaisons avec d'autres réalisations.. Aeronautical Engineering Fluid Dynamics Boundary Layer.
