

Ecopoetics Essays In The Field Contemp North American Poetry By Angela Hume Gillian Osborne

"Pressestimmen 'This innovative volume showcases a capacious range of critical approaches to the diverse forms, social practices, and political imaginaries of contemporary ecologically oriented poetics. Drawing poetry and environmental theory into compelling new configurations, Ecopoetics: Essays in the Field offers an essential field guide to ecopoetics in a calamitous era.'--Margaret Ronda, University of California-Davis 'These incisive essays offer persuasive arguments for the relevance of diverse poetry to the actualities of ecological damage. They demonstrate how many contemporary poets, whether writing about green stuff, cities, selves, or language, take a critical stand alongside environmental scientists and campaigners, offering vital resources for our altering world.'--Peter Middleton, University of Southampton This sharply conceived volume is a hive of essays by alert pollinators, buzzing around ecopoetics with fierce determination to rise above casual assumptions about its potential and its applicability. Their deft appraisals are instructive, witty, and bound to provoke serious reconsideration of all that's at stake in poetry.'--Jed Rasula, University of Georgia
